

When E Says Its Name

Here's another time E says its name, when it's all by itself at the end of a two-letter word. Read these examples:

be he me we she

The last one is different! It has three letters, but the s and h only make one sound, right?

I am eating a red beet.

I can hear mine beating.

He will reach home so fast.

He is teaching pitching.

We ride miles on neat bikes.

No, bake a cube cake and feed me it.

Go dig a hole and fill it back in with mud.

(O can do this as well—no, go, so, but not to or do!)

Do not be here late!
